

Parents arrested after police find baby dead, kids with bugs crawl...

Documents show the parents neglected the children.

PHOENIX — A 1-month-old is dead and parents are in jail on charges of child abuse.

Court documents paint a grim picture of the family.

Police said they got a call January 5 from a neighbor.

Investigators found a 1-month-old boy dead in a bed.

Police interviewed the baby's parents and found out the baby was having trouble breathing.

Instead of calling 911, police say the parents waited.

Documents say Ferguson went outside for help, but it was too late.

The other children living in the home were also sick.

The children, ages 6 and younger, were infected with lice and had itchy skin.

After pronouncing the baby dead, first responders found other problems. Doctors later found that the baby had been neglected.

A 15-month-old was also found to have been neglected.

In an interview with police, Ramirez said she was not the mother.

One of the children told police their dad was the father.
